| Compulsory REVISION comments | 1) Analysis is very complex and not easy to understand for readers. I suggest using only one statistical software (STATA or SPSS). Don’t copy paste complete tables from the software after running simulations. Have a look on the article published in Elsevier or Springer and give only those statistics required to justify your findings (e.g. coefficients, t stats, R square, Durbin-Watson or any other).
2) Write up of the article require some serious work. In my opinion, authors are not native speakers. Therefore, I suggest to proof read this article from any professional scientific writer. | |
