| Compulsory REVISION comments | 1. The rice husk is not the new item used in the effluent treatment.
2. But, the application on the particular KRPC effluent is a novel one.
3. Spell check has to be carried out.
4. The Statistical analysis is compulsory, which is missing in this paper.
5. In the graph, the scale must be mentioned properly. Labeling is not appropriate.
6. FTIR results are missing. |
| Minor REVISION comments |                                                                                                       |
| Optional/General comments |                                                                                                       |
